There is only one thing that I know of, since it is impossible to unite all the 400,000 or less civil service employes into one compact body. That is to consider affiliation with the American Federation of Labor and thereby arouse the interest and support of 4,000,000 men and women, many of whom are working within view in private corporations."

The Borland rider he called "one of the best things that ever happened in Congress. It awakened the passive employes of this District and forced them out of a lethargy which seventeen years of hard work, speeches, meetings and all kinds of retirement propaganda failed to do.

"It made it possible for a strong organization of 5,000 employes to spring into being in a few short weeks. The Federation of Labor flew to their defense; and they successfully defeated the Borland rider. Might I suggest that these people show a little interest in retirement and not wait until they are the recipient of a notice asking for their resignation on account of inefficiency due to old age. We must try, and try hard, to have a retirement law passed before the time comes when the heads of departments will settle the retirement question by retiring the superannuated without pay."
